Head of Supply Operations

Hui Yang joined the Global Fund as Head of Supply Operations in March 2021. She leads the department's work to develop swift and imaginative interventions and ensure the continuity of lifesaving commodities in some of the world's most complex environments. She directs sourcing, procurement, quality assurance and supply functions, including NextGen market-shaping approaches on innovation, new product introduction, supply base diversification and a supply chain agenda that is focused on environmental sustainability.

Yang brings over 20 years of experience in procurement and supply across the public and private sectors, including 16 years with Procter & Gamble where she championed sustainability initiatives with a focus on lifecycle management, partnership and ecosystem management, business transformation and innovation. Prior to the Global Fund, Yang established and led the procurement and supply function at the International Organization for Migration, strengthening procurement capabilities, process integration and automation at the organization.

Yang has a degree in business and Japanese studies and a master's in business administration and management from the University of Hamburg.
