Dr. Mark D. Bardini is an international development professional and Monitoring, Evaluation, & Learning (MEL) expert. He has successfully started up MEL practice areas and led strategic growth initiatives at four international private sector organizations, including three small businesses that have grown exponentially as multimillion dollar companies. Currently, he is a Lead Management and Program Analyst in the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Agency (CISA) at the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. As Khulisa Management Service's Senior Vice President for M&E and U.S. Operations, he oversaw the management of the company's international development portfolio of U.S. and international donors and also served as a Senior Advisor for MEL, while securing over $30 million in new business. He previously was appointed as an Evaluation Advisor to the Evaluation Department at the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD) and currently consults with the Independent Evaluation Group at the World Bank. Dr. Bardini also serves on the Editorial Board of the African Evaluation Journal and as a Reviewer for the American Journal of Evaluation.

Dr. Bardini has more than 26 years of experience in the field working in over 100 developing countries on various sectors including health, education, private sector development, banking and finance, agriculture, democracy and governance, global security, counterterrorism, and economic growth. He has held senior level positions at the World Bank and the International Finance Corporation (IFC), the Millennium Challenge Corporation (U.S. Government), and in private sector consulting. Additionally, Dr. Bardini serves as an Adjunct Professor at the Johns Hopkins University School for Advanced International Studies (SAIS) and provides guest lectures for the College of Arts & Sciences, the Batten School of Leadership and Public Policy, and the Global Studies Program at the University of Virginia, where he received his Ph.D. degree.
